Customer Reviews

Youth are seeking to discover who they are, and the StrengthsExplorer can be a valuable resource for them and their parents. Based on current research on human strengths, the StrengthsExplorer invites young people to learn about their unique talents and skills in a way that is positive, thought-provoking, and relevant to everyday life. --Ross A. Thompson, Ph.D., Department of Psychology, University of California, Davis

The questions in this book were an excellent exercise to go through with our 10 year old. It gave us a real opportunity to talk with him about strengths and goals. We found the test to be spot on with what we observe, but it helped clarify areas of strength, and also areas we may need to help more. This is a fun and informative exercise for children and parents, and the explanations of strengths offers great insight into future growth.

I did StrengthsFinders at work 10 years ago and it was a great experience. I bought the version for kids for my 11 year-old. The material doesn't have a lot of depth. The top 3 were helpful for my son to see how to use his strengths and how they are important. I would prefer to see what the other strengths are to help him see what else is out there.

Basic for a 11 year old but useful none-the-less. Entry to middle school is a great time for a child to realize his/her strengths.

This would have been fine, but we opted to buy this for our 14 year old son and we found it was slightly too juvenile for him. We should have let him take the one for adults.

I bought this because I love the Strengths Finder for adults. The children's version is just as great. My son loved reading about his strengths and I enjoyed the tips for parents!

A very interesting "strength-based" approach to improving school performance. My daughter is enjoying it.

The lesson plans are easy for parents to use at home and are a good resource for teachers. Teachers will be able to develop additional experiences and discussions for their students.

I ordered these for students that I work with, and have found them very useful.
