Synopsis

France is far and away the most popular country in the world for foreigners to take walking vacations, and Provence is the most popular walking area in France. Each walk sets out from a delightful village or town, worth exploring in its own right.* TRANSPARENT SLEEVE PROVIDED If it rains, read the card through the transparent plastic sleeve.* CHARMING PLACES TO STAY NEARBYCombine great walking with memorable overnight stops.* WALKS FOR EVERYONEThe walks range from half a day to two days, and are aimed at recreational walkers as well as those looking for a more challenging trip.

Customer Reviews

Adrian Woodford completed his first major walk at age 21, from the Alps to Rome. He has since led groups of walkers throughout the world, from Syria to Sevenoaks, from mountain crossings to ancient city streets. He has contributed to numerous guidebooks, and writes regular articles on walking and travel for magazines and the international press.

This is a great idea, but so poorly executed that they are an obstacle rather than an assistance to way finding. I would suggest that using them as a sole source to guide your hike, based on my experience, is confusing at best and dangerous at worst. I did 2 of these hikes in the Luberon area (the Gordes hike and the Rustrel's Colorado hike) and ended up relying solely on the blazes, trail markings and detailed GR trail maps pertinent to the specific region in France. After the 2 miserable experiences mentioned above with the cards, I decided that their only value is to suggest good areas in which to hike. I was really excited about these cards, but they were exceptionally disappointing from a way finding standpoint. Save your money for the GR maps and Judy Smith's "Holiday Walks in Provence".

Can't wait to travel to Provence this summer and try out some of these hikes. The cards seem so easy to use, great descriptions.

Very good hiking guide. Recommended
