Book by Patrick, Ellen

Not worth the paper its printed on, could be (and probably was originally) a random list of one-line suggestions found in a suggestion box at a Welcome station. Example: "9. Stroll down River Street in Savannah." Really? Why? Would it have killed the authors to say why this was worth doing? Example: "81. Go to a concert at the Tabernacle." Really? Why? Where is "the Tabernacle"? Why couldn't the authors at least make a little blurb telling where, when and why to do the 101 things? I guess they assumed the suckers who wasted their money on this book have unlimited time to google and research everything the authors referred to; or were born and raised in Georgia and had become familiar with every vague local reference in grammar school. This is definitely NOT a helpful guide in any way. And a great many of the items are ridiculous and not inherent to Georgia at all, example: "64. Have a fish fry." Like you can't do that anywhere in the WORLD? This book is garbage.

It had a lot of wrong info in it. The things that were correct I really enjoyed. It is a very small book in size. If you are from Mississippi (as I am) you will be a little disappointed in this book.
