Customer Reviews

Well to be honest this is a tricky area of work if you don't know what you're doing. You really have to know what you are investing your money into and then you have to go to the house in person to see what the damages are and what you are gonna have to fix up to buy the house and see what profit you can get out of the house. Then when that is done you have to get workers to pull the things out that need fixing. You need to get people to fix repairs and also check out the landscape. You can do some of these things yourself if you know what you're doing. But know this. It will add up to all the people you need to hire. Before you go working on a house you need to make yourself a budget of how much you are going to spend on the house and what things can be knocked the fastest and get the harder things out the way the fastest. After all that is done you have to add up the money you have invested in the house and what the house is worth then and crunch some numbers to make profit. I only gave you a few tips, but this book gives you bunch of ways on how to do these things which really breaks it down.

A timely and well written book on real estate investing. The author does a good job of clearly defining terms in easy to understand language. There isn't just lists of terms but examples applying those terms to help you better understand. Little nuggets are shared throughout the book like what a FHA 203 loan for refurbish/repair projects is and why industrial property is a good idea for first time investors. I like the section on financing, the author doesn't sugar coat it. There are two great chapters on flipping and common mistakes to avoid that I found useful. Great book especially for a first time investor.

This E book covered the basics of property investment - from the types to their respective pros and cons. It is effective in presenting what future investor can benefit from real estate investment.
