The book outlines the history and contribution of Patrice Emery Lumumba, who was born in 1925 and ranks among the greatest pan-African political leaders of the twentieth century. The book describes the political activities of this eminent Congolese freedom fighter. Lumumba's involvement in trade union activities and his founding of his political movement which eventually propelled him to power when the country declared Independence in 1960 is clearly explained. The various forces with an interest in the fate of the country are analysed and explained. These include the former colonial power Belgium, the superpowers the USA and the then USSR that were locked in the Cold war the time. The book explains how Lumumba mobilised the Congolese people to vote him Prime Minister of the country and his eventual overthrow from power by Colonel Joseph Mobutu and his tragic assassination. Lumumba was assassinated in January 1961 and to date controversy and debates rage as to who was responsible for the killing. The DRC has been unstable since the demise of Lumumba. However, his ideals still inspire the Congolese people in their quest for peace, justice and prosperity.
