#4 Non-Fiction -- Boston Globe, August 4, 2001

Martha Zschock is not only an accomplished artist. She is also a grade-school teacher who developed her first book from field trips with her students. She knows what turns on kids - and adults - about a great city like Boston.

It seems a bit strange to use an alphabet book format for middle schoolers, but the idea is well-executed in this nicely illustrated guide to Boston. The book begins with an undetailed map of the Boston vicinity, continues with a paragraph of introduction, and then moves on to the alphabet.

Each letter gets a full page and has an alliterative title with a few explanatory sentences and some related factoids. For example, "M" is entitled "Minutemen made ready at a moment's notice

Great

I thought this would be great for my children but I enjoyed it, too! Lots of info about Boston and it's history! Made our trip there even more interesting! Would recommend it highly and wish there was one for every city!

After having recently returned from a trip to Boston and surrounding towns, this was a fun review of places and things. Plus I love ducks.

Fast, dependable and fun!

I highly recommend this book to anyone looking for a baby book! This is my staple baby gift! The series is fabulous; lots of cities are featured! Education, exploration, and fantastic illustrations!

A wonderful book to see Boston and find out about Boston. I would recommend this to anyone (adults and children) about to visit Boston. I am looking forward to buying more books by this author and illustrator.

I wouldn't have even chosen a star for this review but it makes u choose at least one! I hope I loaded the video correctly so that u can see the condition it is in...terrible!
